

1. I lied about my real intentions and completely dumped the entire WW project on Bennetta without telling her. I LIED ABOUT WHAT I WAS WILLING TO COMMIT TO.

2. In March 95 Bennetta had told me that she was going to ask if the Women's group could take on and handle Winter Wonderland this year as our project. I don't recall exactly where we were but it was in Clearwater. She asked me what I thought about it and I told her it was a great idea, that I loved it, I was completely enthusiastic about it as if I were ready to start tomorrow. This was PR and I was not really that interested in it at all. At the CEC dinner Bennetta announced at the table we were sitting at that "we got it". I recall completely misduplicating what she had said. I thought she was trying to shut me up because I had arrived late and made too big of a deal about it. She was trying to tell me we got the project. I could have cared less but acted as if it was really a cool thing. I never once said to Ben how I really felt about the project and that it was of zero importance to me. I played along as if I was on the same team as her and we were moving forward. I had no intention of moving anywhere on anything. I planned to dump the whole project on her instead of doing anything myself. 5 months were lost in the fund raising during the year. Bennetta was left with the entirety of the project alone, without any real help -I'm not aware of anyone really pitching in to help her. She spent many many hours on worry and concern about how the job was going to get done. She lost much sleep. There were many many hats she had to wear with lining up entertainment, getting site things coordinated, arranging for all the permits from the city, getting volunteers to help, getting the charitable donations set up, finding the trees, setting up the delivery and ordering of all the activities on the site, finding the correct lines for that, contacting local schools and churches and doing the PR work necessary to gain their participation, sorting through and seeing what materials were left from years past and arranging to have that repaired or put into some working order, dealing with the city about using Coachman instead of the past sight, taking heat from the paper on the project, not putting this on anyone's lines but just handling it in PR, finding where to get all the materials and arranging to get them, every single detail of every single action this activity involved, she has the hats and was wearing them single handedly. The hat pass from previous years was a disaster, lines were half way turned over, many lines were missing, data was dispersed all over the place so it was a massive confusion. Six times the ordinary amount of 8C required was having to be exerted by Bennetta alone. I was the most likely candidate she could really count on and I completely shit on her. I don't know that she would have ever even considered taking it on without me. So she took it on thinking she had a very strong stable terminal backing her (me) and she didn't. She never put any of this on my lines directly. My failure to be responsible for WW added to the stress and worry of handling the disaster at the office I helped to create 70% of, this added to making not fun (because of the other stress) the additional social activities she had committed to that had to be done (like Pamela Hackley's baby shower and the Halloween Party) which would have ordinarily been fun, I cost her much time she would have liked to spend with her family of which she had none, added stress, time and additional actions on all the hats she had committed to on every other activity she had. Added to the stress of completely handling the arbitration flap which consumed much time and was dev-t.

1. I refused to confront the responsibility I had for WW and wasted time and did not raise money leaving the ED with a big problem and putting the project, the ED and the Church at severe risk.

I BLEW OFF MY RESPONSIBILITY TO WHAT I'D PROMISED

2. After I attested to Clear in September on a Sunday at my apartment. I was right before the OT Committee meeting and I had not done anything to raise money the entire day (or even possibly that whole week). I think I had been at the office working on my post stuff. Bennetta had called me to talk to me about the project. I had layed down and was not feeling real hot, I was majorly PTP'd about how I was going to do the job but I wasn't into create I was into non-confront. She talked about how critical it was that I get my ass in gear now and she started talking to me about the purpose of the project, how it would get on so many lines and what we could do with those lines, a light bulb came on for me and I started looking at my responsibility/ but instead of confronting what I needed to be DOING in order to handle the money aspect of the project, I went off into a Q&A about how I wasn't being responsible and why was that and figure figure. I looked at the KRC triangle, the definition of responsibility but I refused to look at what I WASN'T doing to handle the situation or what overts I had that was keeping me from confronting or seeing or having more knowledge or getting production occurring. The project was sort of a blur to me and I wouldn't confront what it was that I was doing/or not doing that was keeping me from producing, instead I went off into a more comfortable approach of something I was willing to confront. I went to the OT Committee meeting that night and did a little rah rah but not near enough to create the kind of flow we needed. I got about $45.00 and I decided that I had done enough and left it at that. It was like: well, I'll make a motion in some direction and just let what will happen. Instead of: ok, this is what I need and this is how much direction is needed and this is the direction I need to be going and this is how much effort must be exerted and I don't stop until I get it. More time was wasted, more pressure was put on Bennetta, more production was lost, it was PR I was delivering, not products.

What was over 2 I BLEW OFF MY RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE COMMITMENT I'D MADE ON
 1. I PR'd myself and Bennetta about my fund raising and did not do what I needed to do in order to get the product. ~~Instead~~ I wasted time, and resources and put the project at risk. BY NOT DOING

WHAT I KNEW I NEEDED TO DO
 2. One Sunday before and at Flag at the OT Committee meeting. Before the meeting, Ben called me and was talking about what kind of action needed to be taken in order to meet our goals. She was telling me what was happening with our deadlines for money and she pointed out that I was not taking the kind of responsibility I needed in order to handle the project. I told her yes I realized that and completely "yes'd" her every comment. I hung up the phone and felt like shit. I was sitting in the middle of my OWs on not having done what I had promised I would do. I made myself go to sleep and not confront it more. I woke up and was trying to make myself feel good, not caved in like I had been feeling, man it was painful and I hated it. I was trying to make the whole painful situation pleasant so I didn't feel like shit so I decided to play a game at the OT Committee for my own benefit more than anything else. I had about 5 minutes at the end of the meeting and I had pulled together some enthusiasm and got the group to participate to the extent of throwing some wadded up money in the middle of the floor. I had not set it up properly in order to run the kind of control that needed to be run I just threw something out and hoped it would fly, it fluttered. I left the meeting knowing I had blown it because I did not round everyone up and get them to contribute, I left it up to them and walked away with $45.00 for an hour and half's work, a complete waste of resources and time. I could have probably found 3 people and raised close to $1000 if I had just done it properly in the amount of time I spent dicking around at the meeting. I completely wasted another full evening of production time and no real money was raised and not even cycles set up to be collected on was done. The ED was dumped with more worry and concern about having enough money to do what needed to be done. This continued to add more pressure and the project became less fun for all. This created much more risk at not having the resources handled to fund the project on time.

What was over? I BLEW OFF MY COMMITMENT TO WW AND CHOSE TO
 1. I set up a covert reg cycle with Greg Frost and ended up wasting my entire evening that I should have spent raising money for WW and got zero production done. WHAT I WANTED TO DO INSTEAD

2. On Monday, October 9th at the Sand Castle. Greg was someone Stephen Hackley had introduced me to on a 2D interest. I had spoken to the guy a couple of times and he seemed nice. I wanted to spend some time with him to get to know him better but I had the project of WW to raise money for which was not getting done. Monday night was the night I had committed to WW because I was on course TUES, WED, THUR so Monday was my only night, which meant it was critical I spend my time very wisely and make the most of it raising money. I talked to Greg that day and told him that I really wanted to see him and talk to him about the project I was working on. I needed to get in front of someone that night and raise the money, I had read his bio and it said that he made enough money "to raise a small army" which I thought made him pretty qualified for regging. I did not make it clear to him that the purpose of my visit with him was to reg him and I intentionally left it out, I just said, I wanted to tell him about the project. I knew he was interested in discussing the possibility of a 2D with me and I did not handle that aspect of our visit up front. I went to the Sand Castle and waiting for him in the MAAs office as we'd agreed. There were people in there I could have spoken to about the project but I didn't. I spent the time reading from the Scientology handbook to work on my 2D ethics program instead. Greg was in word clearing a friend of mine. He came out to let me know he wouldn't be long. He finished up and went in to see the MAA on his own personal cycle. We got together at about 10:00 and I followed him to his house so he could put his daughter to bed. I was exhausted and wasn't really up to the alertness I needed to be in order to deliver a good presentation or even talk sensibly for that matter. I should have passed and just spent a few minutes talking about nothing too serious and gone home and went to bed and chalked it up to a day over. He began on the subject of the 2D. I told him I was an ethics particle at the present and needed to work out some things based on a recent promiscuity sit I had put myself in. We discussed who he was and what he was best at in life a bit, I didn't really get into telling him too much about who I was and left it with the fact that I am an ethics particle and need to get through my ethics program which I am working on and that I'm not ready to present myself just yet. I swept off the subject without any further comm and went right into telling him about Winter Wonderland. He caught it and took me back to the subject of the 2D which I again told him I wasn't ready to do anything in that area right now and I had to work on my project. I told him my problem that evening was that I had only a limited amount of time to do WW but that I had really wanted to see him too. That the only way I could justify spending time with him was to talk to him about the project. This was a far cry from being totally responsible for the project and I really was trying to then make HIM responsible for what I was doing as opposed to accepting full responsibility myself. I practically went anaten trying to tell him about the project. It ended up not being productive in any way. It created a ridge between us, it did not serve the correct purpose to enlighten about what I was doing on the project, it put me on a withhold, it wasted his time, I made him wrong for not contributing, I ended up with zero donation and another night completely wasted leaving the project at financial risk, the ED-WW in deeper shit with me not raising money.

I BLEW OFF MY RESPONSIBILITY AND COMMITMENT TO WW
1. ~~I wasted time when I was supposed to be raising money for WW.~~

2. On October 9th in the MAAs office at the Sand Castle. I started talking to my friend, the MAA snapped at him to get busy on his word clearing and he said he didn't have anyone who could help him. The MAA turned to me and asked if I could work with him for a few minutes, I said yes and ended up in an hour long M9 cycle. I did not talk to him about the project at all. I had spent the previous 30 minutes just sitting in the MAAs office not talking to anyone but with my head buried in the SCN HB reading up on my 2D eth pgm I had put myself on 2 weeks earlier. I had claimed to be only able to work on WW on Monday as that was the time I had allotted yet here I sat working on my 2D pgm instead. The only night I had to raise money for that week was burnt doing other cycles which had zero results for the project I was working on. Production was lost, I could have probably raised $1000 that night had I been spending my time wisely but I didn't and it wasn't. This created risk to the project and it's target completion being met, this created stress and worry for the ED with no money being produced. This contributed to a complete bypass by the ED to get the money raised herself with her juniors who should have been spending time working on entertainment and other vital activities to the site. This caused unnecessary dev-t for the ED
